

Shingle Style Architecture for the 21st Century

E. Ashley Rooney
with foreword by George Fellner

Silver Twig

R.S. Granoff Architects P.C. designed this 6,500- square-foot house as a family retreat where the clients could relax, entertain, and spend the summer with their children. The front porch and porte cochere create an inviting look to this Shingle Style farmhouse. Courtesy of Elliott Kaufman

This home design won first place in Architectural Digest's New York 2008 open audition. Courtesy of Elliott Kaufman

Gable roofs, towers, expansive overhangs, brackets, shingle siding, and asymmetrical composition are signature elements. Courtesy of Elliott Kaufman

The dramatic one and half story great room has a large picture window facing the back yard and trusses made of dark antique wood beams. Courtesy of Elliott Kaufman

The light-filled stair tower with Shaker paneling provides a strong architectural and visual element. Courtesy of Elliott Kaufman

To celebrate the owners' extensive art collection, special display walls were built for flat art, while customized "art nooks" house specific sculptures. Courtesy of Elliott Kaufman

Exposed beams of reclaimed wood punctuate the ceiling of the large country kitchen with its brick hearth and white cabinets. Courtesy of Elliott Kaufman

